

The Zuckerberg Institute for Water research is pleased to announce

The first Water-Summit and establishment of the Zuckerberg Water Prize

May 22nd - 23rd, 2022

Sde Boqer Campus, BGU, Israel

The biannual international WATER-SUMMIT will assemble leading scholars from around the world in the broad field of water science and technology. This upcoming summit will cover four main topics related to water security in a changing world: desalination, water treatment, hydrology, and aquatic microbiology.

The ZUCKERBERG WATER PRIZE in the sum of $60,000 will be awarded during the water-summit to acknowledge outstanding achievements and global impact in the broader field of water. The prize is endorsed by the Zuckerberg Institute for Water Research (ZIWR) - a globally leading institute conducting cutting-edge multidisciplinary research and advanced education in water sciences, aiming to improve human well-being in drylands through technologies and policies for sustainable use of water resources. This legacy award is granted through the generous donation of Mr. Roy Zuckerberg, Honorary Chairman of the ZIWR.

Nominations for the inaugural round of 2022 are now open.

Submissions welcome from 1/1/2022 to 1/3/2022
